

As a certified transmission system operator, GASCADE Gastransport GmbH is active in the pipeline-based transportation of natural gas and hydrogen throughout Germany.

We combine economic success with a strong sense of responsibility for health, safety and environmental protection (HSE).

Management and all employees of GASCADE Gastransport GmbH are therefore committed to observing the following principles, taking into account the HSE management system in place:

- We ensure a safe and healthy workplace, create an environment that motivates employees to take personal responsibility, including in the field of HSE, and provide the necessary resources to do so.
- We expect every employee and contractor to play an active part in implementing these principles by acting in a committed and responsible manner. Each individual is responsible for complying with the HSE requirements of GASCADE Gastransport GmbH with regard to themselves and in their work environment.
- We use the findings from risk assessments, audits, incident investigations, the company's suggestion scheme, and energy evaluations to continuously improve our HSE performance lastingly. The aim is to deliver efficient HSE solutions.
- We organize our activities to meet our social responsibility toward our stakeholders, such as employees, contractors, authorities, neighbors, and the public.
- We live up to our responsibility for protecting the environment, the climate and for preventing harm to the environment. We ensure that we use resources sparingly.
- We develop an environmental management system in line with socio-economic aspects and thereby continuously improve our environmental performance.
- We continuously improve our energy management system and our energy-related performance. We take energy efficiency into account when planning and procuring energy-related products and services.
- We are committed to complying with local legislation in Germany and abroad, our internal standards and generally accepted working practices in all our activities.

The following applies to all we do:

Nothing is so urgent or important that the HSE principles can be ignored.
